

“Next Generation Europe”

Cres, 22 – 27 September 2024

Regaining new European and democratic momentum

The “CRES Summer School”, organised on the island of Cres (Croatia), will focus on the topic “The future of Europe: EU enlargement and resilience in search for new political answers”.

Context:

After the elections to the European Parliament, a new European political cycle is about to start. We are in the midst of discussions regarding the strategic orientation of the European Union as well as the line-up of the next European Commission and the European Council. The debate on the EU’s future is happening now and will also involve further steps regarding the enlargement and deepening of the Union. After two years, Russia’s war in Ukraine is fundamentally changing the context of EU enlargement policy as well as the functioning of the Union, recalling geopolitics. Russia’s exercise of neo-imperial control puts all governments, particularly the EU’s Eastern neighbourhood and Western Balkans, in a vulnerable position by calling into question the basic principles of a rules-based international order and challenging essential EU values. It also affects the question of dependencies on geopolitical powers such as China, Russia, Turkey, and the West. The EU is at a crossroads. While still putting considerable emphasis on conditionality, it will likely have to move away from an enlargement policy focusing overwhelmingly on incremental reform to one that is about the survival of independent, self-determined states. Meanwhile, Ukraine, Moldova, Georgia, and Bosnia and Herzegovina have joined the group of official EU candidate countries, which also includes Montenegro, Serbia, Turkey, North Macedonia, and Albania, while Kosovo has applied for EU membership. Visibly, the EU’s reaction will now have to offer more than symbolic gestures, and the candidates need to demonstrate more than political commitment.

For a long time, enlargement was considered one of the EU’s most successful foreign policy instruments. However, today, the EU’s enlargement and neighbourhood strategy require a major re-set and new political answers.

Aims of the “Cres Summer School”:

The aim is to support a new generation of young European experts, scholars, activists, and engaged citizens in their work for a new Europe and new European togetherness. The interaction will provide young researchers and activists with knowledge, experience, and skills relevant to their professional futures and the future of Europe. Researchers and activists, starting from those that participated in the first edition of the Summer School in Cres in September 2022, organised in the framework of the “WB2EU project”, will form a vibrant new network of enthusiastic young people and leaders able to meet political challenges, deepen the dialogue with decision-makers, and thus contribute to regaining a new European and democratic momentum.

The “Cres Summer School” will lead to

1. an increased understanding of Europeanisation and democratic developments among young researchers and activists,
2. new ties and networks between researchers, civic activists, and politicians,
3. new ways of influencing public debates through qualified, evidence-based, and yet politically engaged activities.

Target group:

- Max. 20 young researchers, active young civic activists, and engaged citizens

The participants (age max. 28 years) will be nominated by partner institutions (1 participant from each partner). Furthermore, decision-makers and stakeholders will be invited and engaged in dialogue with the young participants on the topic of Europeanisation and democratisation.

Working methods and approaches:

- Lectures, workshops with presentations, and discussions of research projects and forms of civic activism
- Developing scenarios and action plans regarding the future of Europe
- A specific dialogue format dedicated to the meetings with stakeholders
- Preparation of a joint op-ed and a series of YouTube videos

The "Cres Summer School" will include politicians, senior external experts, and researchers from the following institutions: the University of Rijeka, the Royal Elcano Institute, ÖGfE, oiiip, IRMO, CAS SEE, the Trans European Policy Studies Association (TEPSA), the Sciences Po Center for European Studies, the European Commission, ambassadors of an EU member state, and other relevant speakers.

The organising team of the "Cres Summer School", in charge of coordination, providing leadership, moderation, and workshop guidance for the "Cres Summer School", consists of Senior Research Associate at the Institute for Development and International Relations (IRMO), Senada Šelo Šabić, Secretary General of the Austrian Society for European Politics (ÖGfE), Paul Schmidt, Senior Researcher at the Austrian Institute for International Affairs (oiiip), Co-Director of the Center of Advanced Studies Southeast Europe (CAS SEE), Vedran Džihic, and Research Associate and Project Manager at ÖGfE, Susan Milford-Faber.
